Parent, teacher groups sue Bay board, superintendent

By RICH ADAMS
The North Bay Parent-Teacher Organization and the Bay St. Louis Local American Federation of Teachers have filed a $20,000 federal suit charging "intentional denial of civil rights" against School Superintendent J.D. McCulloch and the Bay St. Louis Municipal Separate School Board.

The suit was filed about 11 a.m.

Wednesday at Southern District, U.S. District Court in Biloxi, a deputy court clerk confirmed.

The plaintiffs allege eight specific violations of their civil rights in the suit, many of which stem from the school board's controversial Policy 18.

The suit names McCulloch as an individual defendant, and also names each board member individually and the board as a whole as defendants.

The two organizations, represented by Attorney Gerald Blessey of Biloxi, are requesting a jury trial to determine

disclaims suit

By RICH ADAMS
The president of the Bay St. Louis Local of the Mississippi Association of Educators said Wednesday her union has no complaints concerning the Bay St. Louis Municipal Separate School Board.

Judy Barrett was responding to a $20,000 federal suit filed Wednesday morning against Superintendent J.D. McCulloch and the board by the Local American Federation of Teachers and North Bay Parent-Teacher Organization.

"As far as the MAE is concerned, we have no complaints against the board," Barrett said Wednesday.

"Our working conditions have improved during the last month and we hate to see anything happen to the board," she continued.

"We have been able to express our opinions at the board meetings without being on the agenda. The board realizes we are interested in education and the improvement of education in the community," Ms. Barrett said.

"With the assistance of the board, especially James Ginn and Betty Diboll, we are working toward the realization of a good educational system," she added.

"The board realizes we are not going to do anything drastic," Mrs. Barrett explained.

McCulloch, named as a co-defendant in the suit, is a member of the MAE.

If the punitive damages will be allowed.

The suit was filed jointly Wednesday by PTO Representatives Lana Noonan, Charles Gottschalk, Gloria Holland, and Mrs. Elmer Boyd; and Local AFT President Andrews Wilkinson.

The nature of the case against the school board, according to the suit, is to seek:

— "...a preliminary injunction to order the Defendants to permit the Plaintiffs to copy certain financial journal sheets, to require the Defendants to give notice of their 'work sessions' when a quorum is to be present, to permit the Plaintiffs reasonable opportunities to be heard at meetings of the Defendant school board, and opportunities to obtain copies of board minutes and other official documents in a reasonable and timely manner and at reasonable costs;

— "...a permanent injunction compelling the Defendants to rewrite within Constitutional guidelines their policies for citizens to appear and be heard at meetings, to have reasonable notice of meetings, and to copy official documents;

— "...punitive damages plus attorneys fees as a result of the Defendants' intentional denial of the Plaintiffs' civil rights."

The suit also seeks "...injunctive and declaratory relief and punitive damages and arises under the First and Fourteenth Amendments..." to the U.S. Constitution, the petition states.

The suit alleges 13 specific actions by the superintendent or the school board have resulted in the infringement of Constitutional rights.

"Since April 11, 1977, these Plaintiffs, who are also all taxpayers of the Bay St. Louis Municipal Separate School District, have attempted from time to time to be placed on the agenda of certain regular and special meetings of the defendant board in order to express facts and opinions regarding the decisions of the board," the suit reads.

"Since November 18, 1978, these Plaintiffs have attempted from time to time to obtain inspection and copying of official minutes, claims dockets, journals, and other official public records of the board.

"The Defendants, individually and in their official capacity, have, on each such occasion that the Plaintiffs attempted to get on the agenda, unreasonably imposed one or more of the restrictions of Board Policy 18 or its predecessor policies, even though other persons similar to the Plaintiffs were allowed on the agenda without meeting the same restrictions and requirements of Policy 18."

"The Defendants have denied the Plaintiffs reasonable access and opportunity to inspect and copy official documents of the board in a reasonable manner and at a reasonable cost and have, as of July 11, 1979, imposed a new copying policy which unreasonably restricts the Plaintiffs' access to this public information..." the suit continues.

"The Defendant, J.D. McCulloch, has on numerous occasions during this period since April 11, 1977, personally

Suspect jailed

Coast Electric employee killed

By RICH ADAMS
A Coast Electric Company employee was found dead in his company truck early Tuesday afternoon and a suspect has confessed to the apparent murder and is being held in an undisclosed jail, according to Hancock County Sheriff Sylvan J. Ladner.

Curtis E. (Chopper) Holman Jr., 28, Route 2, Box 611, Waveland, was found dead in the driver's seat of his truck on Guevestown Road in Catahoula Community.

Holman apparently died of a bullet wound in the head over the right ear, according to the sheriff.

The body was discovered around noon Tuesday by fellow employees who were also working in the area.

After questioning residents and Coast Electric workers, Ladner and Chief Deputy Ronnie Peterson apprehended Edgar Pete Moran, 45, Cuevastown Road, Catahoula, and charged him with the murder.

Ladner said Moran, a self-employed farmer and county election official, confessed to the shooting. "We apprehended him (Moran) at his home and asked if he had shot Holman, and he said 'Yes, I did it,' and we arrested him," Peterson reported.

Ladner said Moran told officers he and Moran got into an argument on the road and that Holman hit him in the arm with a stick.

A large axe handle was lying on the floor of the truck when the body was discovered.

The sheriff said Moran gave him a .25 caliber automatic pistol, the gun believed to be the murder weapon.

Two spent .25 caliber metal casings were found on the ground near Holman's truck, along with three bullets which were ejected but not discharged.

The sheriff speculated the pistol may have jammed and the unspent bullets were ejected in an attempt to clear the jammed weapon.

Two additional unspent shells were discovered in the weapon apprehended

Lakeshore youth dies in mishap

By RICH ADAMS

A nine-year-old Lakeshore youth was killed Tuesday after his bicycle slid beneath a car near the boy's home on Lakeshore Road in Hancock County.

Sheriff Sylvan Ladner reported Leon Lee Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Lee Sr. of Lakeshore, died Tuesday afternoon at Gulfport Memorial Hospital during surgery after he was pulled from beneath a car driven by Dale Anthony Bilbo, 32, of Lakeshore.

The mishap occurred at approximately 12:10 p.m. in front of Chink and Ruth's, a lounge on Lakeshore Road.

According to the sheriff, Bilbo and his wife were returning from the beach when the Lee youth rode his bicycle into the path of his car.

The bicycle and youth were trapped beneath the car and dragged about 30 feet before the car came to a halt, the sheriff explained.

Lee's father and Bilbo jacked the vehicle up and removed the boy from beneath the automobile, and the youth was rushed to Gulfport Memorial Hospital, where he died.

Deputy Dennis Davidson investigated the mishap, Ladner said. No charges have been filed, the sheriff added.

Funeral services will be conducted today at 11 a.m. at Lakeshore Baptist Church with burial in Lakeshore Cemetery.

Other survivors include two stepbrothers, Eric Joseph Johnson and Richard McConkey, both of New Orleans, and a sister, Mrs. Patricia Lee, of Biloxi.

Carriere man dies, wife hurt in Pearl accident

By ELLIS CUEVAS

A 30-year-old Carriere man was killed and his wife injured in an apparent boating accident near the mouth of the East Pearl River Wednesday afternoon, Hancock County sheriff's deputies reported.

The victim was identified by the investigating officers as Leroy V. Evans Jr.

Mrs. Evans was taken to Hancock General Hospital apparently suffering from lacerations caused by an outboard motor propeller, the deputies said.

Mrs. Evans and her husband were picked up near the east bank of the river by another couple identified as Mr. and Mrs. Bill Waters who were on a fishing trip in the area.

A flat-bottomed boat with a 35 horsepower motor was circling in the water, the Waters couple told officers.

The Waters notified an L&N Railroad bridge attendant they were bringing the victims to Baxter's Marina in Pearlman.

Through his wife's assistance, the bridge tender arranged to have authorities waiting at the marina.

Officers said the exact nature of the apparent accident will not be known until they can question Mrs. Evans.

Investigating officers included Deputies Paul Bernard, Nathan Hoda, Ronald Cuevas and Alvin Ladner.

Hancock Coroner Carl Banderet held a preliminary inquest and ruled accidental drowning until further investigation.

Officers on the scene praised the Waters' family in rescuing Mrs. Evans.

Waveland teen dies

Hospital, Waveland Police Chief Donald Dorn reported.

"The hospital put out an urgent call for B-positive blood for Peterman and many people arrived at the hospital to donate the blood," Dorn explained.

Peterman and two other youths were at one of the youth's home on Sears Avenue in Waveland when one of the youths took the shotgun out of its case and began cleaning the weapon on a bed in a room which the three were gathered," Donald Dorn said.

Peterman was by the door, one youth was near a dresser that was close to the door and the other youth was on the bed cleaning the gun," he stated.

"The gun went off and the discharge struck Peterman in the left side," lamented the chief of police, obviously saddened by the tragic accident.

"The youth cleaning the gun did not know the gun was loaded," Dorn said.

Dorn said he could not release the names of the other two youths because of their juvenile status.

The slain youth was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Peterman Jr., proprietors of Peterman's LI Super Food Mart on Coleman Avenue in Waveland.

Peterman was a student at St. Stanislaus High School.

Funeral arrangements are being handled by the St. Stanislaus Parish in Bay St. Louis.

Bay school system seeks district accreditation

By LESLIE WILLIAMS

Acquiring Southern Association of Schools' accreditation for Waveland and North Bay Elementary was another responsibility given to the Bay St. Louis Municipal Separate School District's Educational Assessment Committee Monday night.

Bay school board authorized the committee to investigate the regional accreditation requirements of the Atlanta-based Southern Association and "determine the schools readiness for fulfilling accreditation requirements."

North Bay and Waveland Elementary schools have Mississippi Board of Education's AA accreditation, but do not have regional accreditation.

"Personally, Waveland Elementary Principal James Baldrice said, 'I feel we need to take immediate steps necessary to distinguish any and all overcrowding before final application for Southern Association accreditation.'"

The Educational Assessment Committee was created to examine educational programs to determine the degree of success achieved by each; the need for remedial programs to augment existing programs; the need for additional educational programs to meet the educational needs of the community; determine the desirability of deleting, combining or otherwise modifying marginal programs; and recommended funding priorities.

The committee is expected to present a report to the school board before Jan. 1.

The committee is composed of three parents selected by each PTO in the district for a total of six representatives; two teachers selected by teacher organizations in the district along with two parents selected by the Tiger Booster Club, one each for the high schools for a total of six.

The Bay St. Louis mayor and city council will select three citizens to serve on the committee with one designated as chairperson, plus two parents selected by the Tiger Band Aids for a total of five.

The mayor and board of aldermen of Waveland will select three citizens to serve with one designated committee vice-chairman.

One of the citizens should be a district resident living outside the city limits of Bay St. Louis and Waveland.

In addition, two parents will be selected by the Tiger Booster Club, one each for the senior and junior high schools for a total of five.

The committee will also have an administrator selected by the superintendent; one school board member selected by the board.

The school administrators will meet with the committee as consultants to provide advice and information as requested by the committee.

Board member James Ginn will represent the school board on the committee.

Also Monday, the board scheduled Aug. 30 at 7:30 p.m. for a general quarterly meeting which school employees and the public are invited to express their views.

In other business, bids submitted from bakeries, office supply companies, furniture distributors, newspapers and an auto dealer were accepted by the board with the understanding the purchaser of an item select the lowest and best bid.

American Federation of Teachers President, Andrews Wilkerson requested the school board, in accordance with state law, "pay teachers' salaries in equal monthly installments for a period of 12 months."

"If the teacher's contract is based on a period of months in excess of the number of months for which the school is operated," Wilkerson continued, "the first such payment shall be made on the last regular school day of the calendar month in which the school opens and the remaining payments shall be made on the last regular school day of each calendar month thereafter for the number of months provided by the contract."

This method of payment should be provided only for teachers who desire this method, he added.

EXPERIENCE IS NOT JUST A WORD!

Experience is actually doing a job. Experience is gaining specific knowledge through day-to-day work in a field of endeavor. Experience is a valuable asset, especially in a job that requires not only formal education, but a knowledge that can only be obtained by doing.

The office of Chancery Clerk is such a job. There is no specific course that can be taken to prepare one for this office. Knowledge of the operation of this office is gained by doing.

John D. "Big John" Rutherford has been Chancery Clerk for 7 1/2 years. He has experience. He is good at the job. He has the knowledge to manage the fiscal affairs of the County.

He has the knowledge to administer the various programs under his authority. He has the knowledge to maintain court records and county documents. His knowledge was gained through experience.

Candidate Praises Home-County Vote

W.O. 'Chet' Dillard, who is in the Democratic run-off for Attorney General, said this week his vote in Jones County is evidence that people who know him voted for him.

Dillard, a 49 year old attorney from Jackson, was a city prosecutor and district attorney when he was living in Laurel.

"The people of Jones County know me. When you receive 60 percent of the vote from your former home county with five candidates running for the office, it's a good bet that they have confidence in you," he said.

"They have seen me try lawsuits and they are aware of my ability, qualifications and experience. They have seen me in court before juries and know I can get a job done in a effective, efficient and professional manner."

Dillard noted the importance of such a vote should not be overlooked.

"Since the first primary was so low-key, many voters say they just voted for the first name on the ballot. The second primary campaign will be different. We will run an aggressive campaign. We want the voters to know they have choice for a trail lawyer in the attorney general's race."

MSU Registration Change Announced

Students who plan to enroll at Mississippi State University for the fall term but who did not preregister should be aware of a change in their registration schedule, says L.D. Furgerson, dean of records and registration.

Furgerson said registration for non-preregistered students will be held Thursday, Aug. 23, in Humphrey Coliseum, rather than Aug. 24, as was listed in an earlier schedule.

"The date was moved to permit those who did not preregister to make schedule changes on the second day of registration (the 24th) rather than on the first day of classes," the dean said. Classes begin Aug. 27.

"The change," he added, "will allow us to complete much of the scheduling and rescheduling while the registration process is still set up in the Coliseum."

The order of registration for non-preregistered students is: 8-9:30 a.m., Ma-Mz; 9:30-9:45 a.m., Na-Rh; 9:45-10:00 a.m., Ri-Su; 10:00-10:15 a.m., So-Vz; 10:15-10:30 a.m., Wa-Z; 10:30-11:00 a.m., Aa-Bh; 11:00-11:15 a.m., Bi-Bt; 11:15-11:30 a.m., Bu-Cq; 1:30-2:00 p.m., Cr-Dz; 2:00-2:30 p.m., Ea-Gd; 2:30-3:00 p.m., Ge-Hd; 3:00-3:30 p.m., He-Iz; 3:30-4:00 p.m., Ja-Kz; 4:00-4:30 p.m., La-Lz.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) provided $11,397.66 during October 1978 through June 1979 under the Emergency Feed Program to help Stone County livestock producers buy 617,987 pounds of feed.

Under the Emergency Feed Program, the Secretary of Agriculture may authorize financial aid to farmers when their livestock are threatened by conditions brought on by a natural disaster such as the drought last fall. Participants may be reimbursed up to 50 percent of the cost for feed purchased during the emergency period. This, however, may not exceed two cents per pound in terms of feed grain equivalent.

During fiscal year 1979, USDA provided $100.4 million nationwide to help farmers buy approximately 9.97 billion pounds of feed.

We should never forget!

It was only 10 years ago when Hurricane Camille rolled in along the Mississippi Gulf Coast.

Those of us here will never forget the nightmare, heartaches and events which followed the disaster.

The seeing of many of us walking around in a daze, wondering what happened, how did our family and friends make out? - what will happen in the future to us, will we be able to continue as a community, will we be able to rebuild?

Talking to those who lost everything and almost their lives, and everyone seemed to have a more horrible tale to tell. There are those today who report still having nightmares of the night Camille rolled into the Mississippi Gulf Coast.

Many of the scars of Camille have been repaired, the lives lost will never be repaired, the memories will always be with us.

We can be thankful for the many aides and assistances we received which enabled us to be in the position we are in today. We had friends all over the nation from President Richard Nixon to our neighbors in Louisiana.

In a recent conversation with an elderly lady, who now resides in Gulfport and has relatives living in Hancock County, just how much help we received was mentioned by her as being unbelievable.

She reports that she was a young bride living in the English Lookout, La. area in 1915 (yes 1915) and lost everything she and her husband had in a hurricane, and almost their lives.

They received absolutely no help from anyone, had to start with only the clothing on their backs, no place to stay, no food, no Red Cross, no SBA loans, no one bringing in food or any aide.

We can very well remember the folks from New Orleans driving over and circling the Town Hall (now City Hall) of Waveland and placing bags upon bags of groceries, ice and clothing, people with a feeling for their fellow man, coming to the help of those in need.

It is great to live in the world we live in today, to be Americans, and be proud of being Americans.

Bits 'n pieces

It would do us all good to attend the Hurricane Camille Memorial Service Friday night at Christ Episcopal sponsored by the Hancock County Ministerial Association.

The 10 years which have passed since Camille sometimes seem like only yesterday and other times a very long time ago.

We have many things to be thankful for and it would be a benefit to us all in being at the special service.

We wish St. Stanislaus and Brother Bennett success in the AUJ Senior Nationals Weight Lifting meet this weekend. The winners from this event will be the United States champions.

The Mr. Western Hemisphere Physique contest for men should be of interest to the ladies.

Our Community should be proud of such events taking place right here in Bay St. Louis, and show our support by attending.

Who knows, you may end up on National Television as we understand NBC will be here filming the two big events.

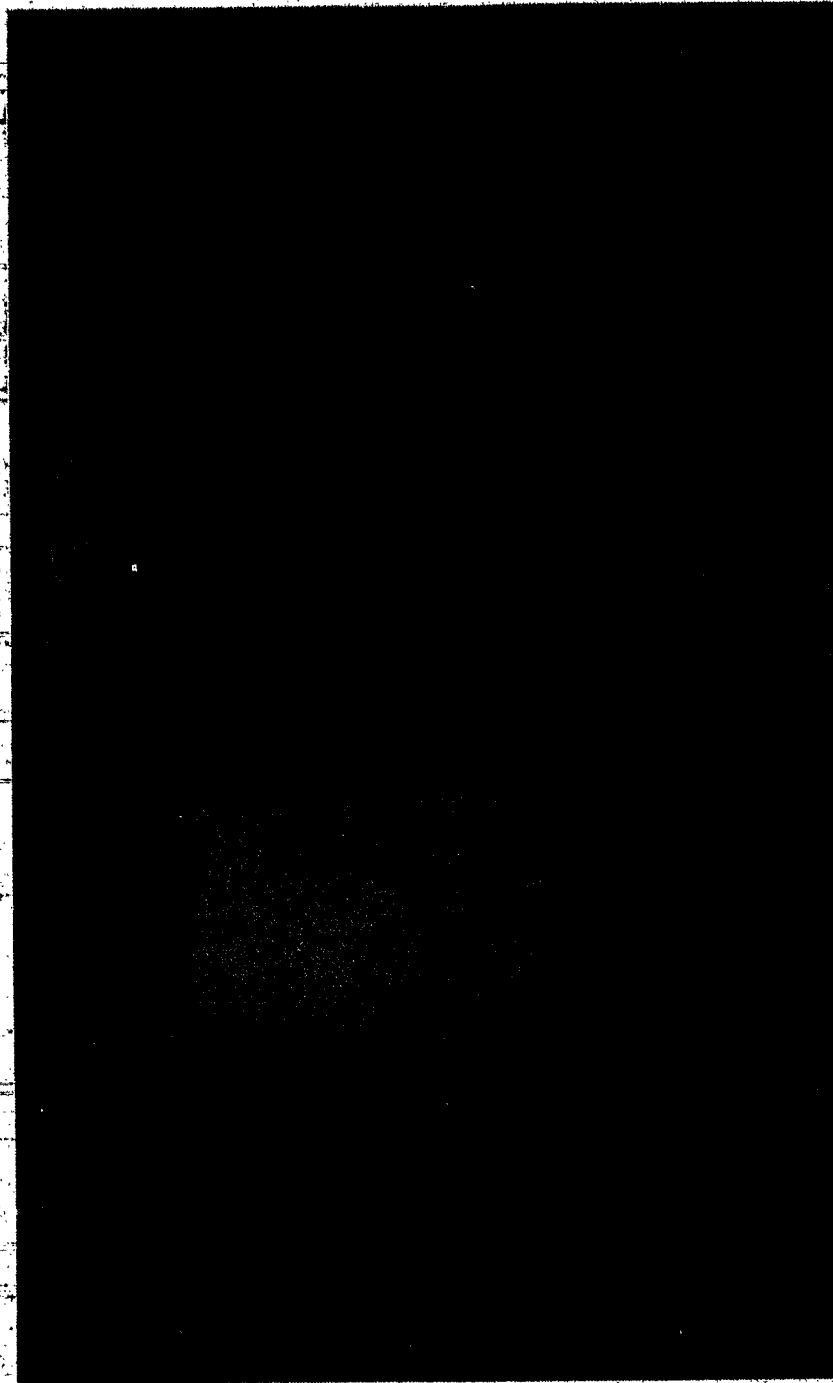

We were happy to hear that Lou Brock of the St. Louis Cardinals got hit number 3,000 Monday night. We saw Brock cut it from six to only four to go Saturday night against Chicago in Busch Stadium.

Folks were flocking from all around St. Louis Saturday and Sunday to view the space shuttle 'Enterprise'. Make us proud to have been a product with engines which were tested right here in Hancock County.

All the Rockwell International employees at NSTL should be proud to know that your colleagues in St. Louis were doing a fine job displaying the Enterprise.

The police had their hands full with the large crowds of thousands who viewed the craft Saturday and Sunday, in St. Louis.

While in St. Louis we spent sometime with former Sea Coast Echo Publisher Larry Nash and former News Editor Jerry Whittle. Both seem to be doing well. Nash publishes a newspaper in Tennessee, and Whittle one in Georgia. It was good to visit with these fine folks and enjoy the ball game with them.

KNOCKED OVER AGAIN-Burglars broke the plate glass window in front of Alden Mauffray's Hardware Store on Beach Boulevard in Bay St. Louis early Wednesday morning and made off with an undetermined amount of merchandise. The break-in was the fourth such occurrence in the past 18 months. (Staff photo-Bandy Ponder)

Washington report

By Trent Loft

NEW HOPE FOR AMERICAN EXPORTS
The largest single trade bill in U.S. history, worked out after six years of discussions with 86 other countries, has been signed into law now, and it offers new hope for American exports.

Passed overwhelmingly by both the House and Senate before being signed into law by the President, the act is designed to make American-produced goods more competitive on the world market. As a result, textiles, poultry, feed grains, soybeans and other exports from Mississippi and elsewhere in the country should benefit.

Many Members of Congress agreed that the proposal will mark the beginning of a new era in U.S. international trade policy. It should lead not only to more American exports but also to more scrutiny of unfair actions in international trade.

And, as brought out in briefings sponsored by the House Republican Research Committee which I chair, there was heavy input from private U.S. business enterprises. The final product, then, was acceptable to American business, which helps account for why it breezed through Congress.

Since World War II, the basic policy on international trade had been governed by the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, which was signed in 1947 by 23 countries. Trade between countries grew rapidly after the war and, by the 1960's, the world's economy had expanded greatly, with more countries seeing the benefits of gradual reductions in trade barriers.

But world economic growth slowed in the 1970's as rapid increases in oil prices and "above-average" unemployment rates prompted countries to promote exports and to protect their domestic industries from cheap imports. The problem was exemplified by the U.S. down trade deficit, which went from $2.3 billion in 1971 to about $28.5 billion last year.

The new trade accord should help control the flow of goods in international commerce by establishing mutually acceptable ground rules by which the participating countries agree to conduct their trade. The bill contains a tariff cut of about 35 percent over the next eight years, a series of non-tariff barrier codes and agreements on a variety of products.

Provisions include setting uniform methods of determining the value of goods in trade and discouraging the use of special product standards. The new law should mean more than $20 billion for U.S. producers in the long run.

It appears that the law has carefully balanced the interests of producers while at the same time guarding the economic concerns of the consumer. Given a chance to work properly, I believe the law will produce meaningful results.

Timely note as United Way Campaign opens

Sea Coast Echo
Bay St. Louis, Miss.

August 12, 1977

Dear Mr. Editor:

Well, that time is around once more for us to dig deep down in our pockets to help the United Way.

Not only the United Way, but the Cancer Society - it is terrible news when one hears he has cancer.

I was operated on three weeks ago. I want to thank all of my friends for being so kind for all of the beautiful flowers and cards.

My heart over flowed with gratitude. The Senior citizens and Day Care Center for their prayers and most of all to my good neighbor, Mrs. Genevieve Cole for the good food, and welfare for their help, all are beautiful.

What would we do without so many good people. So please, if you can, give and give to the Cancer Society and United Way.

Esther Travica Cuevas

P.S. Also want to thank my wonderful Doctor Barkley, all good nurses at Garden Park in Gulfport.

Scouting can be fun, report reveals

Editor

Sea Coast Echo
Bay Saint Louis, MS. 39520

Dear Sir:

I would like to take a moment to express my surprise and delight at the beautiful coverage your paper gave the Hancock County Girl Scout Day Camp.

Jean Wood, our director of field services, shared with us in Hattiesburg this issue of your Sea Coast Echo.

The photographs showed a real feeling for the girls and their experienced at camp.

These are the kinds of pictures we feel can show the public Scouting can be fun as well as a learning experience.

You really must have a true understanding of Girl Scouting to have captured so well the different moods of camp life, and especially for sharing them with your readers.

Very truly yours,

The need for a Constitutional Amendment requiring a balanced federal budget is being realized by more and more members of Congress. It appears that efforts to adopt such an amendment will be successful.

Perhaps even more encouraging is the fact that we are making definite progress toward bringing expenditures more in line with the amount of money taken in by the government each year.

The Congress recently completed work on the resolution setting budget limits for the next fiscal year, 1980, and we were able to cut the budget deficit to less than half what it was just two years ago. The federal deficit agreed upon for 1980 is $23 billion, compared to $33.5 billion this year and $48.8 billion for 1978.

These figures show that we are definitely moving in the right direction, although we must not stop until we can really balance the budget and wipe out deficits completely.

This must be done in a gradual way, so as to avoid the ill effects a sudden shift might have on our economy. We must avoid a recession with all the economic wisdom we can muster. But, above all else, we must find ways to hold down the high cost of living which is hurting average Americans as they try to maintain economic independence.

Setting out national financial affairs in order will greatly help our economic condition.

I have joined with a group of 33 senators who are vitally interested in a balanced budget, and we are going to work together as a group in addition to our individual efforts. We have jointly asked the Chairman of the Subcommittee considering a balanced budget amendment to report a bill to the Senate early this summer.

For years I have seen the need for a constitutional Amendment requiring a balanced budget and have worked toward obtaining adoption of one. It is indeed encouraging to see that the need is finally being recognized and a strong effort is underway.

The Bottom Line

We are having a hard time in our department store. Having been in the business for 10 years, we have seen a lot of changes. As a result, we are now in a position to offer you a new and improved service.

Dear WN: The new step is up to you, of course. You can continue to operate as a discount store, or you can become a department store.

And, if it's a department store, the only one in this condition. As a department store, you have some of the best of both worlds. You have the best of the department store, and you have the best of the discount store.

So, if you are a department store, you have the best of both worlds. You have the best of the department store, and you have the best of the discount store.

For the best of both worlds, you have the best of the department store, and you have the best of the discount store.

So, if you are a department store, you have the best of both worlds. You have the best of the department store, and you have the best of the discount store.

For the best of both worlds, you have the best of the department store, and you have the best of the discount store.

disse, fewer brands of each item, and more in-store service.

Promotional sales will be replaced by competitive everyday prices, he said.

The new chairman anticipated correctly, a drop in overall sales.

But in analyzing the effects of the changes it was found that test sales were practically all in promotional items, and most importantly, that test sales were dropping.

So, Sears is backing their old tracks and apparently right now.

How can Sears do that? It's a question that has been asked many times. The answer is, they are not.

But the story doesn't end there. Sears is not the only one who is not. There are many other stores who are not.

New Federal Tax Laws Boost Capital Investments

MISSISSIPPI STATE - The new federal income tax law contains several provisions to encourage farm and other business owners to boost their capital investments, according to Dr. Johnnie Sartor, Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service economist.

For example, any cost incurred after October 1978 to rehabilitate a building used for production in business may be eligible for a 10 percent investment tax credit.

"There are several qualifications," says Dr. Sartor. "The structure - such as a hog house, barn, horticultural facility - must have been in use 20 years or more. The improvements must have a useful life of five years or more. No more than 25 percent of the exterior walls may have been replaced. And, the building must not have been enlarged."

"Houses for people don't qualify under the investment tax credit," adds Dr. Sartor. "Neither do costs of buying, completing or enlarging a building."

Sartor gives this example of the rehabilitation credit: "Suppose you put $4,000 into replacing partitions and electrical wiring in a barn that has been in use at least 20 years. You would get a $400 credit against your taxes," he explains.

Farmers should check with a tax advisor or the local Internal Revenue Service office for answers to ques-

Cool Weather Vegetables Add Interest To Gardening

MISSISSIPPI STATE - Mustard, turnips, tendergreens, kale, Chinese cabbage, collards - what do all these vegetables have in common? They are all leafy greens that can be grown in the garden during late August, September, October and November. Don't, however, limit your fall gardening efforts to these vegetables, says Dr. Milo Burnham, Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service horticulturist.

You can show your skill as a gardener by growing broccoli, the most nutritious vegetable of all, and spinach, the third most nutritious vegetable. What happened to the vegetable ranking second in nutritional value? Well, that's brussels sprouts - a hard vegetable to grow in Mississippi in the spring or fall, says Dr. Burnham.

"In addition to the cool season vegetables, the fall garden can also produce another crop of bush snap beans and Southern peas, if you hurry," he adds. "Time is not as critical for the southern half of the state as it is for the northern half. The warm season vegetables and long term cool season vegetables (beans, peas, Irish potatoes, cabbage, broccoli, cauliflower and brussels sprouts) must be planted in early August in north Mississippi."

The months of fall also bring harvest of vegetables planted in late spring and summer. Sweetpotatoes are dug in October before the soil gets cool. Even though the vines are still green, dig the potatoes if they've been planted 100 to 120 days. The longer you leave a sweet potato in the ground, the larger it gets as long as the air and ground are warm.

"October is also peanut harvesting time and the time to haul in pumpkin, winter squash and gourds," Dr. Burnham reminds gardeners. "When the peanut plants begin to yellow, lift the plants and turn them over to expose the peanuts to the sun and air. This is the time to pull green peanuts for boiling. Let the others dry and then place the plants in a protected, well-ventilated, dry place for final drying."

Fall planting has a couple of "musts" for success. You must provide adequate moisture for the seeds to germinate. If the soil is dry, water the garden a day or two before you plan to plant, or pour water in the opened seed drill before placing the seed in the drill.

You must provide sufficient fertilizer and water to keep the plants growing. Time can be short in the fall garden. Any reduction in growth delays harvest and increases the chances of frost hurting or killing the vegetables. Also, any stop in growth can greatly reduce yields by stunting the plants or making the leaves bitter.

You must control weeds that compete for moisture and fertilizer and harbor insects and diseases. Spinach, a cool weather leafy green, is rapidly gaining popularity. A substitute for lettuce in salads, it has a new taste and texture, has a good green color, has more nutrients and can be grown in the garden all winter and spring. Spinach prefers a soil with plenty of organic matter, a pH near 7.0 and cool temperatures. Soak the seed overnight before planting, and you'll avoid some of the problems of getting a good stand.

"All in all, fall gardening can be a lot of fun. The weather is usually clear and cool and makes working in the garden enjoyable. Don't put away your seed, fertilizer and garden tools. Break them out for what may be some of the best gardening you've had all year," he urges.

Bay schools approve

Policy rewards sport, academic deeds equally

By LESLIE WILLIAMS
Bay St. Louis Municipal Separate School District's Board of Trustees Monday approved an awards program which equalizes recognition for athletic and academic achievements.

"This new award program is precedent-setting and reflects that academics are of equal importance with athletics," said Andrews Wilkerson, junior high teacher who served on a committee which developed the program.

The committee, established in May to examine the academic and athletic awards programs of the district, recommended the board accept the new awards policy.

Superintendent J.D. McCulloch stated, "I can live with this new awards program—I'm in favor of the new system."

Wilmor Seymour, the school system's athletic director, added, "The athletic department is always being accused of receiving all the money, the figures in this new program show athletics don't get all the money."

Wilkerson and McCulloch agreed the new program provides the school district with written, detailed guidelines to follow, thus helping end the controversy surrounding awards distribution.

"We are one department that did get cut under the new program," Seymour explained, "but I hope the plan will work."

The superintendent and board member Betty Diboll praised the committee for working diligently on the awards project.

The new awards program will be incorporated into the appropriate student handbooks and policy directives governing the conduct of student activities.

Areas in which students may receive awards include—honor rolls, academic subject area, National Honor Society, interscholastic athletics, band, cheerleading, attendance, chorus, student helper, student newspaper and student yearbook.

Total yearly cost for awards under the program is $5,500. McCulloch said this is approximately what awards cost the school system in previous years.

Under the new policy, senior high students may receive:

An academic jacket for making the alpha honor roll for the first five grading periods, and a school T-shirt for making beta honor roll for the first five grading periods.

—One award per subject area not to exceed $5 in cost. Only 12th grade students are eligible and will receive their awards at the graduation ceremony.

—A pin signifying membership in the National Honor Society and an academic stole for graduating members.

—A school jacket after the first year of successful participation in winter scholastic athletic programs.

Criteria for successful participation will be established by the school district. In addition, trophies or certificates may be awarded to deserving participants provided the total does not exceed $250. Graduating seniors may be given best male and female athlete awards not to exceed the amount of $5 each.

—A jacket at the end of the first year of successful participation in the band. Successful participation criteria shall be established by the school district. In addition, trophies or certificates may be awarded to deserving band members provided the total amount for such awards does not exceed $75. An award may be given to the graduating outstanding band student not to exceed $5 in value.

—A jacket for cheerleaders at beginning of the year for which they are elected. The jacket will remain school property until the student has successfully completed the year's participation in accordance with criteria established by the school district.

—A certificate worth approximately 50 cents for students with perfect attendance. Graduating seniors who have perfect attendance for three years of high school shall receive an award which does not exceed $5.

—An Outstanding Choral student award not to exceed $10. In addition, a choral award may be presented to an outstanding graduating senior.

—A certificate worth approximately 15 cents for student helpers.

—A trophy, not to exceed $10, for serving successfully for one year on the staff of the student newspaper as editor, a $2.50 trophy for serving as assistant editor and a 15 cents certificate for staff level service.

—A trophy, not to exceed $10, for serving successfully for one year on the student yearbook, a $2.50 trophy for serving as assistant editor and 15 cents for staff level service.

There are also policies regarding awards for elementary and junior high students in the committee's report.

Committee members, appointed by schools president Mrs. Joseph Gex, include Mrs. Donald Diboll, Robert Magee, James Baldree, Wilmer Seymour, Mrs. Clarence Ladner, Glen Page, James Smith, Mrs. Norman Sonier and Andrews Wilkerson.

Safety Precautions Stop Destructive Grease Fires

MISSISSIPPI STATE — Never leave a pan with grease on the stove unattended, and never heat grease until it smokes, says Susie Overstreet, Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service health education specialist.

Overheated grease and accumulations of grease on stoves and walls near stoves cause many fires in homes and restaurants, she explains.

To control a fire that may occur despite safety precautions, first turn off the burner or oven. Cover the pan with a lid carefully, slicing the lid over the top of the pan in a motion away from your body to smother the flames. Do not lower the lid on the flames. This will cause them to spread sideways and increase the risks of burning yourself or catching your clothing on fire.

Don't carry the pan to the sink. Leave it on the range or in the oven until it cools, she cautions. Don't ever use water, flour or sugar on a grease fire. Flour will explode, sugar will burn and water will only push the fire out of the pan.

Baking soda can be used to extinguish a grease fire, she adds. Use enough to cover the entire fire, starting at the front and working back as it covers the flames. If you can't cover the pan or don't have baking soda handy, use a dry chemical or carbon dioxide fire extinguisher. Stand back and deposit powder or gas gently in the pan so flames won't scatter.

If you own a fire extinguisher, read the instructions for using it before a fire occurs. Check the area around your range. Make sure curtains, towel racks, paper towel dispensers and waste paper containers are a safe distance from the stove.

Keep your range in first-rate operating condition, she adds. Be careful when you're lighting a gas oven; make sure the burner is lit before closing the oven door.

New telephone directory cover features Coast sunset scene

South Central Bell began delivering nearly 115,000 copies of the Mississippi Gulf Coast's new telephone directory this week.

The company's District Manager, F. M. Kyle, Jr., said it will require about 10 days to deliver the new books.

"We anticipate that delivery will be completed by August 23, 1979," he said. Any customers who do not receive their directory by August 23, 1979 should call the business office," he added.

Kyle said the front cover of the new directory features a color scene of a familiar and beautiful Mississippi Coast sight, sunset along the beach.

The circulation of this much-referred-to directory, here and throughout the country should serve to promote our coastal area.

According to Kyle, too few recipients are likely to devote more than a passing glance to the directory's first few pages—known as the "Call Guide."

Many telephone users are not aware of the variety of helpful information the Call Guide pages contain.

"Most important," he emphasized "is the portion devoted to emergency numbers. This can be even more valuable if you take time to study it carefully before an emergency. You should also write in special numbers you might need later, such as the number of your personal physician."

"In addition," Kyle said, "the Call Guide in the new Mississippi Gulf Coast directory tells how to place local and long distance calls, how to reach the telephone company business office and other helpful information."

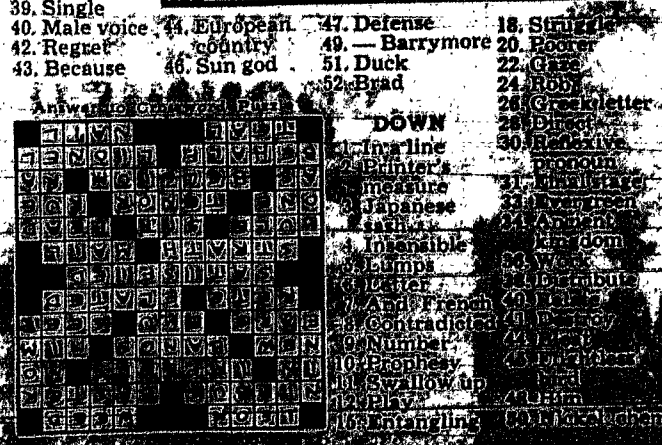

The Call Guide also includes a handy list of area code numbers for use in making long distance calls.

More than 600 telephone users in the North Mississippi area will be served from the new Call Guide and each has requested a copy of the new Call Guide. The new Call Guide has been coordinated with the delivery of this new Mississippi Gulf Coast directory.

Ag Affairs

The high cost of energy has hunted the keen edge of typical American sophistication. Recent years have seen a cyclical move back toward more basic ways of doing things.

Many rural people over the years have clung to certain basics that worked quite well despite the mainstream of folks bent on doing things the very latest way.

A few years ago this writer sat down in the cool shade beside a small manmade waterfall on the Hollis Batson place in Stone County to watch water cascade from a generously-flowing, spring-fed, woodland pond.

The water was directed by wooden troughs to the blades of a water wheel and squeaked rhythmically as it slowly turned and started the sparkling clean water through a pipe up the hill to the Batson home. It was their sole water supply and a good one.

That scene flashed through my mind on the day recently when I picked up the phone to talk to a man in southwest Mississippi who asked if I'd do one of my AG-AFFAIRS columns on hydraulic or water rams. I said yes and this is it. Hydraulic rams were invented early in the 19th century to move running water from its source uphill a short distance - utilizing the power of falling water to force a small portion of the water to the height desired above the source.

No electric or fuel powered pumps are involved and the water ram only has two working parts.

And in this day of high maintenance costs, the ram is unique in that the only maintenance needed is to keep leaves and trash cleaned away from the strainer on the intake, and to replace the check and non-return or delivery valve rubbers if they get worn.

Its popularity naturally was mainly in the out-back areas where power and fuel were unavailable or impractical. Hydraulic rams in the old days could be ordered through such sources as the Sears & Roebuck mail order catalog. Of the more ingenious could build their own for about one-tenth of the cost of a manufactured one.

Two things are needed to make a water ram work - a source of continuous water such as a spring fed brook, and a drop-of-elevation-of-at least several feet to give the flowing water enough force to work the ram.

Its working principles are simple. The water runs down through the drive pipe from its source flowing faster and faster until it forces the automatic valve of check to close suddenly.

The weight of the suddenly halted water creates a high pressure which then forces some of the water past the non-return or delivery valve and into an air chamber.

Here the air is compressed as the energy of the moving water is spent.

This compressed air then acts as a spring and forces water up the delivery pipe to a storage tank in a steady stream.

It is not greatly efficient as it takes a lot of falling water to pump a little water. Often only about one-tenth of the water is delivered up the hill. A mitter hole in the system wastes a bit of water as it takes in a bubble of air with each stroke as required to keep air in the air dome. If the hole clogs up the ram quits.

Small rams work best at about 75 to 90 strokes per minute, depending on the amount of drive water available. The slower it goes the more water it uses and the more it pumps.

Any working fall from 18 inches to 100 feet can be used to work a ram, but the greater the fall the less the ram will cost and the less drive water is required.

In a recently published book on various available alternate energy sources, PRODUCING YOUR OWN POWER by Carol Stoner, Rodale Press, Inc., it is pointed out that these variations in efficiency occur due to fall - 100 gallons falling ten feet would elevate 10 gallons to 80 feet, while 100 gallons falling only five feet would elevate one gallon to 300 feet.

Doubling the fall usually doubles the water delivered.

ASCS Report

SOYBEAN LOAN RATE

REMAINS UNCHANGED

The loan and purchase rate for Pearl River and Hancock Counties' 1979-crop soybeans remains unchanged from the 1978 rate, Franklin A. Gehlin, County Executive Director of the Pearl River-Hancock County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) Office, said.

He said the premium and discount schedule is also unchanged from that used in the 1978-crop program.

The rate is based on the national average loan level of $4.50 per bushel for 1979-crop soybeans, as announced November 11, the ASCS official explained.

This $4.50 loan level is for soybeans containing 12.8 to 13 percent moisture and graded not lower than No. 2 on the factors of test weight, splits, and heat damage, and No. 1 on all other factors.

Copies of the rates may be obtained from the Mississippi State ASCS office, or by writing to the price support and loan division, U.S. Department of Agriculture, ASCS, P.O. Box 2415, Washington, D.C. 20013.

Farmers who have questions concerning the rates should contact the Pearl River-Hancock County ASCS office.

Corn, sorghum and soybean farmers and others have until September 18 to comment on proposals for the 1980 corn and sorghum programs and the soybean loan rate.

Gehlin, said, "Although Secretary Bergland is not required to make most of the program decisions before November 15, he is asking for early comment in the event that weather and other conditions justify making an announcement prior to the deadline."

Written comments are requested on the amount of the national program acreage; the reduction from the previous year's harvested acreage required to guarantee established (target) price protection on the total 1980 planted acreage; whether there should be a set-aside requirement and, if so, the extent of the set-aside; whether there should be a land diversion program and, if so, the extent of such diversion; and the level of payment; whether a limitation should be placed on planted acreage if a set-aside or land diversion program is required; the target prices, and the loan and purchase levels for 1980 crops of corn, sorghum and soybeans.

Comments are also invited on the Commodity Credit Corporation minimum sales price, commodity eligibility, storage requirements, premiums and discounts, and other provisions necessary to carry out the programs.

Comments should be mailed to the director, production adjustment division, U.S. Department of Agriculture, ASCS, Room 3630-S, P.O. Box 2415, Washington, D.C., 20013.

State's Recreation Spots Highlighted On New Map

MISSISSIPPI STATE - There's always something to do in Mississippi: Spring, summer, winter and fall - recreation opportunities abound, according to Dr. Bob T. Chapin, coordinator, Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service Land Use Center.

Now, you can learn the location of all recreation spots and what facilities they offer. The Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service (MCES) and Agricultural and Industrial Board (A&I) have produced a map which features more than 300 recreation events or locations.

"The map is divided into five tour areas which reflect the variety of scenery and history in Mississippi," says Dr. Chapin. "The five tour areas are the Delta, the Hills, the Plains, the Heartland and the Gulf Coast."

Different geographic areas within the state provide contrasting environments, abundant resources and numerous recreational opportunities.

"Each recreation spot has a number," Dr. Chapin continues. "The map has eight categories of activities and facilities - historical, sight-seeing, camping, fishing, hunting, swimming, boating and trails. All are pinpointed on the map."

"We think this map will be a great help to visitors to Mississippi. We need to develop our recreation resources in Mississippi," Dr. Chapin says. "Agriculture, industry and tourism are the three bases for our state's economy. Tourists spent $800 million in Mississippi last year."

The Department of Tourism, A&I Board, funded printing of 25,000 copies of the map. Copies are available.

For additional information on recreation in Mississippi, contact the Department of Tourism, A&I Board, your local Extension office or the Land Use Center, Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service, Box 5405, Mississippi State, MS 39762.

Accidents On Equipment Are Often Avoidable

MISSISSIPPI STATE — Three may be a crowd, but when it comes to tractors or other farm equipment, even two is too many.

These machines are not designed for extra riders or passengers. "Extra rider" accidents happen to children and adults who just want to "go along for the ride," says Dan Reed, farm safety specialist, Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service.

Typically, most "extra rider" accidents happen to children. Children under 15 years of age are victims of "extra rider" accidents in Mississippi yearly. In many cases, the child's parent or another member of the family is operating the tractor.

These accidents can be potentially eliminated — or avoided by doing one thing: Allow no extra riders other than the operator on farm equipment.

Most farm machinery is designed only for the safety of the operator, not for passengers, says Reed. Tractor cabs offer safety only for the operator buckled in the seat belt. No rider can hold tight enough to a fender or other makeshift seat to be safe against a sudden jolt of the machine. Trailers and wagons are not meant for hauling people, he adds.

Make sure tragic "extra rider" accidents are avoided on your farm. Follow these suggestions: Forbid all unnecessary passengers. Don't let your children talk you into a ride. Before moving a machine, check to see that no one else has climbed aboard. Have transportation available other than farm equipment for transporting farm workers to and from fields.

Keep riders off loaders as well as implements pulled behind tractors, cautions Reed. When an extra rider is necessary, such as when you are training a new employee, encourage him to hold tightly and be prepared for sudden jolts.

THANK YOU!

I want to take this means to thank the voters of District Two for the vote of confidence you gave me in the August 7th Primary. I will continue to work fulltime to fulfill the trust you have placed in me. A special "thanks" goes to the many people who worked so hard for me in the campaign. Without your help and support we could not have been successful. Let's all join together now for an even better Hancock County.

Meeting High Food Costs Is Major Cause Of Stress

MISSISSIPPI STATE — Nearly six of 10 American family members say coping with the high cost of food is a major cause of stress, according to a General Mills survey of 1,254 families representing a nationwide cross-section of socioeconomic groups and geographic areas, reports Ann Rushing, Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service marketing specialist.

More than half want more emphasis on eating at home, rather than going to fast food restaurants; 49 percent want more emphasis on nutrition labeling, and seven of 10 said eating together with the family is an under-emphasized health issue.

A total of 33 percent said they would like to see more emphasis on eating three meals a day; 41 percent want more emphasis on the importance of not snacking; 40 percent on the importance of balancing every meal; and 45 percent on eating a good breakfast.

More than one-third of the respondents felt there was too much emphasis on eating convenience and precooked foods, while 38 percent said the amount of emphasis was correct.

More than 60 percent of the family members said food eaten in a fast food restaurant is not as healthy or as nutritious as food served at home. However, going to fast food restaurants, snacking and skipping meals were not considered health threats by the majority of respondents, although crash dieting and fasting were.

Most respondents said pesticides, chemical fertilizers, cholesterol and fat were potential health threats. Many showed confusion about the hazards of sugar and sugar products, nitrites and triglycerides, explains Mrs. Rushing.

When questioned about the government's role in monitoring product safety, 72 percent said the government should warn people about potentially unsafe products, even if they are later declared to be safe. However, nearly 60 percent said they were confused by excessive government regulations and warnings, she adds.

Fifty-nine percent of the consumers questioned said the cost of food is a problem, but one food dollar in three is spent away from home, including bag lunches, she means increased costs for some vice.

If you're concerned about good nutrition and the cost of food, remember that many jobs at fast food restaurants provide nutrients. Food input to nutrition is good or bad. Supermarkets also "continue" to offer a variety of products to the consumer. Foods bought in fast food outlets are usually high in calories. If you must eat out, choose vegetables and salads when ever possible. Buy fresh fruits and raw vegetables for lunches and other meals away from home. Replace soft drinks with milk.

Try to increase your physical activity, she adds.

Mississippi Bowhunters slate annual jamboree in Jackson

The Mississippi Bowhunters' Association (MBA) will hold its annual statewide Bowhunter Jamboree Aug. 18 across from the W. H. Turcotte Laboratory near Ross Barnett Reservoir off Highway 43 in Jackson, with registration beginning at 9 a.m.

"According to Dr. Ross 'Skip' Shelton, wildlife specialist, Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service, this event will include non-competitive shooting on a nature trail and at a running deer target.

Also included will be equipment displays by archery dealers and MBA members and informative talks on bowhunting techniques and equipment, including types of broadheads and compound bows.

Wildlife biologists will discuss the food habits of deer during the bow season and anticipated "hot spots" in the state this year. The Mississippi Game and Fish Commission will present information on bowhunting safety, and the Mississippi Wildlife Federation will sponsor a booth with educational materials.

Doug King of Kings Ranch, and Judd Cooney, professional guide, along with officials of the Pope and Young Club, will be on hand to discuss Colorado bowhunting.

"This is an excellent opportunity for novice archers to gain valuable information on proper equipment and the latest techniques," said Dr.

Shelton. "The public is invited to attend."

The MBA was organized to represent the views of the 14,000 bowhunters in Mississippi. It has been active in educating Mississippi youth and sportsmen by presenting archery and bowhunting programs at conservation clinics, 4-H shooting contests and sportsmen field days.

"The MBA has taken its place among the fine sportsmen groups in Mississippi and wishes to offer its services to all bowhunters," Dr. Shelton said. "Persons interested in learning more about the Bowhunter Jamboree or joining this organization should contact Don Barker, P.O. Box 244, Madison, Mo. 63110.

Many Thanks To The Voters Of Beat One

I want to sincerely thank each of you for the tremendous support and vote of confidence you placed in me on my re-election to the office of Constable in District One.

Tenth anniversary of Hurricane Camille stirs memories of Coast's 'comeback' spirit

EDITOR'S NOTE: Thomas Gause of Washington, D.C. served as a federal government liaison officer in Hancock County after Hurricane Camille struck on August 17, 1969, ten years ago tomorrow. Gause, a personal friend of Waveland Mayor John Longo Jr., compiled the following account and photos chronicling the reopening of St. Clare's Catholic Elementary School just 87 days after the school was completely wiped out in the storm.

The Echo proudly presents Gause's account as a tribute to the indomitable spirit of the people of Hancock County who survived that night of horror ten years ago, rebuilt their lives and communities, and who continue to live today in that same spirit of progress.

A Catholic school on the Gulf Coast was among the casualties of Hurricane Camille's four hours of 200 mile an hour winds producing tides from 15 to 30 feet above normal with total destruction to over 5000 homes, 500 small businesses, and major damage to 11,000 homes. Five weeks after the storm the 19th victim was located in debris behind a shopping

ARMY TENTS AND NASA TRAILERS—Symbolizing the determination from the very beginning of the people of the Mississippi Gulf Coast to rise Phoenix-like from the devastation of Hurricane Camille which struck ten years ago tomorrow are these Waveland school children who were attending classes at St. Clare's Catholic School just one month later. Classrooms were Army tents and NASA trailers, supplied and set up on cleared school grounds through an unprecedented cooperation of many government agencies. (Photo courtesy U.S. Small Business Administration)

OPENING DAY—With an eye to the future greatness of Hancock County in spite of the unbelievable destruction left by Hurricane Camille August 17, 1969, residents of Waveland with the help of several federal agencies, managed to get temporary school facilities set up on the grounds of St. Clare's Catholic School and held these opening day ceremonies on Sept. 24, 1969.

center in Pass Christian. Small Business Administration Administrator Hilary Sandoval learned of the plight of the school on his tour of the Mississippi Gulf Coast disaster area a few days after the storm.

He completed arrangements to open six disaster loan offices and send approximately 150 personnel to man the offices in what turned out to be the largest disaster operation in SBA's history in dollars loaned.

The school had its teachers and most of its pupils. But where formerly there were classrooms, books and teaching equipment, there was now the rubble from dozens of damaged and destroyed homes surrounding what had been a church, parish hall, rectory, convent, and school.

Large pieces of metal protruded and hung at odd and dangerous angles from the floor, walls, and roof of what was left of the school building. Upon Sandoval's return he asked the SBA's procurement assistance division to see what could be done about getting the school reopened.

SBA's first call went to the small business adviser at the Defense Supply Agency. "If tents are required, they are under the jurisdiction of the Army," was the response.

Many calls later produced the tents on a priority ship from the Third U.S. Army, Ft. Belvoir, Georgia, to the Fourth U.S. Army National Post at the Gulfport, Mississippi.

The tents arrived in Gulfport on a ship from Gulfport, Mississippi, at a time when access roads were still closed. The tents were still closed at the time.

was a possibility that the opening could be scheduled for September 22. But on Sunday, September 14, following mass, Sister Ruth, school principal, was overheard saying she doubted if school could open by October 1.

When asked why, she waved her hand at the mountains of debris in and around the school and said, "I cannot have children come on the premises with one brick out of place. The Health Department will not approve and the parents will not send their kids. Besides I am concerned about the tent. When a little kid sits still for five hours it gets cold. You should see the teachers come out during recess wrapped up in big overcoats."

A Parish Council meeting was scheduled for noon that Sunday. Present were two members of the faculty including Sister Ruth; the Home School Association President John Longo, a small businessman and city councilman; the priest, Father Maloney who had originally told Sandoval of the school's plight; Bishop Sumlin from Jackson; and other members of the Parish.

Also present was an SBA man, assigned a few days earlier by his Washington office, to assist.

Lunch had started at the Ramada Inn. North of Waveland, when the SBA representative arrived. It was appropriate that the lunch was held at the Ramada Inn. During the attempted to solve one of the problems preventing school from re-opening the following week: clearance of the unimaginable mountains of debris in and around the school.

Teen-age volunteers from Dominican College and Loyola University in New Orleans had spent the past two Saturdays attempting to remove debris from the school interior. But they had only one day a week to devote. And the very cluttered area surrounding the school had not been touched following the storm.

Sister Ruth was right. At the rate of progress up to that time, weeks, possibly months, would elapse before the debris would be sufficiently cleared to permit children to attend school in safety.

A call went that Sunday before lunch from the small businessman's office by the SBA representative to Col. James W. Gilland, area engineer in Gulfport for the Mississippi Area Office, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

"We need help to clear away debris and remove dangerous hanging metal objects protruding from the floor, the roof, and the walls of the destroyed school. We need it as soon as possible. That is why we are calling now."

Col. Gilland did not hesitate. "Let's see what we can do in the next 24 hours," he called and an SBA representative arrived. The SBA representative arrived. It was appropriate that the lunch was held at the Ramada Inn. During the carpenter and a sheet metal worker to put them back together.

"No moving company will touch this. They cannot get a permit."

CITIZENS FIND A WAY

On Tuesday evening, Sept. 16, the SBA representative ate supper late at the Ramada Inn.

Gathered around a table were the president and vice president of the Hancock County Board of Supervisors, an officer from the county sheriff's office, several contractors, and a member from the church who had been at the Sunday luncheon in the same motel.

The latter called the SBA representative over to the table, introduced him to those present and asked how the school was progressing. The SBA representative replied by stating two of the problems

ONE MONTH LATER—By the fifth week after Hurricane Camille destroyed St. Clare Catholic School in Waveland on August 17, 1969, these kindergarten students were attending classes in NASA trailers and seventh and eighth graders are in the tents supplied by the U.S. Army. While some emotional scars may never be erased, the physical evidence of Camille's destruction becomes less and less with each passing year, and Hancock County is currently enjoying one of the most economically bright periods in its history.

"The Army had the same problem with some tents which they have made available to us. We solved the problem by having the Army assign the tents to the SBA; then we in turn were able to lend the tents to the school under our disaster loan program."

Under the SBA's disaster loan program, loans can be made to business people, home owners or apartment dwellers, and not-for-profit institutions for any damage to real or personal property not covered by insurance.

"We should be able to provide three double trailers and four singles. They should start rolling tomorrow."

Meanwhile, Sister Ruth, the conversation had turned to the school's future. "We should be able to provide three double trailers and four singles. They should start rolling tomorrow."

After talking about the promise of trailers by NASA and the agreement to clear debris by the Corps of Engineers, the SBA representative stated: "Let the good Bishop Brundage and myself represent those pagan babies you helped and we are going to do all we can now to help you."

"The trailers did not start rolling the next day. Hurricane Camille had damaged them and work had to be done to repair them and before work had to be done before one ounce of government property could be moved."

By the following Saturday and Sunday, however, the trailers began to arrive. Throughout the week the trailers were being moved down the 21 mile stretch from the NASA trailers were being moved down the 21 mile stretch from the NASA trailers were being moved down the 21 mile stretch from the NASA completed in time for tents and trailers to be installed prior to the following Monday, September 24.

And 2) at the moment there were difficulties in transporting the trailers from NASA to the school.

One after another the people around the table spoke up. "You need an escort to move the trailers? Take down this number; the sheriff will work with you in every way."

"You need a permit? The Board of Supervisors will help you get a permit."

"You need more fill? Take this number. We'll start additional trucks rolling with fill."

During that week the people at NASA decided not to disassemble the double trailers, but instead to try to move them, assembled, the 22 miles to the school. The NASA Motor Vehicle Department tried to get a permit.

"Because it is so close in time to when the hurricane occurred, all restrictions on permits have been lifted. But you'll have to have a police escort."

"The NASA people called the county sheriff."

"Just give us one hour's notice and we'll furnish you with an escort."

Four times a series of vehicles with flashing red, blue, and amber lights made the 22-mile trip which turned out to take three hours one way, to move four double trailers. A smaller convoy moved the four singles.

Heading the convoy was the County Sheriff's car with flashing red light. On the four lane part of the trip the car was close in front of the convoy, but on the two lane part, the escort car would range far ahead directing oncoming traffic off to the side of the road.

Next in line was a pick-up truck flashing an amber light. Then came a long flat-bed truck supporting the 20 foot wide, ten ton double trailer.

Immediately following the flat-bed truck was a huge mobile crane with an 80-foot boom capable of lifting 25 tons. It was this crane with its swaying high boom which necessitated an average speed of only six miles an hour, a maximum speed of 15.

Then came another flat bed truck with a fork lift on it, the rigging, spreader bars, and slings necessary to lift the trailer off the flat bed and set it on cement block supports.

Next to last in this seven-vehicle convoy was another pick-up truck carrying four crew members. Finally, a NASA security car with flashing blue light concluded the procession and kept cars from passing on the four lane stretches until a by-pass was reached.

"Pretty cute operation," so summarized George Brown, supervisor of heavy equipment and outside maintenance for General Electric, support contractor to NASA.

By the time the first trailers arrived the weekend before school was scheduled to open, much of the debris had been cleared by the Engineers and their contractors with the additional help of another Saturday from the teenage volunteers.

That Saturday noon, Sept. 20, the last strip of asphalt was completed following the grading and filling of the 120 by 200 area.

"Because the grading and filling operation was moving so slowly during the week, on Wednesday, Sept. 15, the offer of the night before of an additional source for fill was communicated to the contractor laying the asphalt."

He agreed to use this additional source, but in so doing alienated one of his workers who wanted to keep the fill coming from only one source, to the point where he walked off the job.

By midnight Saturday, Sept. 10, a group of Seabees finished erecting the last tent. During the evening two school mothers brought food and beverages for the Seabees and others working in the night with light furnished by ten huge lamps powered by a Navy generator.

Up to that time no power had yet been restored to the school area.

A local electrical contractor agreed to work with his men over the weekend to install the necessary boxes and wiring off of nine poles which he set up so light, air conditioning, and heat would be available as the trailers arrived.

The Mississippi Power Company agreed to cut "several feet of red tape" to bring power to the school by Tuesday, September 23. By then, the television stations which had shown an interest in covering the opening day ceremonies had been notified that the first day of school would be Wednesday, September 24, and that only the upper grades would report on Monday, the lower grades on Tuesday.

One television official called Sister Ruth from Atlanta and said, "O.K., we'll postpone our arrival to Wednesday provided you assure us no other channel will be there on Monday or Tuesday."

The week before on Monday evening, Sept. 15, the SBA representative had explained the problem of erecting the tents to Capt. James M. Hill, Jr., commanding officer, U.S. Naval Construction Battalion Center in Gulfport.

"Three of the tents can be moved immediately from Waveland to Mississippi City to a day nursery where 100 and more three, four and five year old children of working mothers are crowded into one building left from the storm."

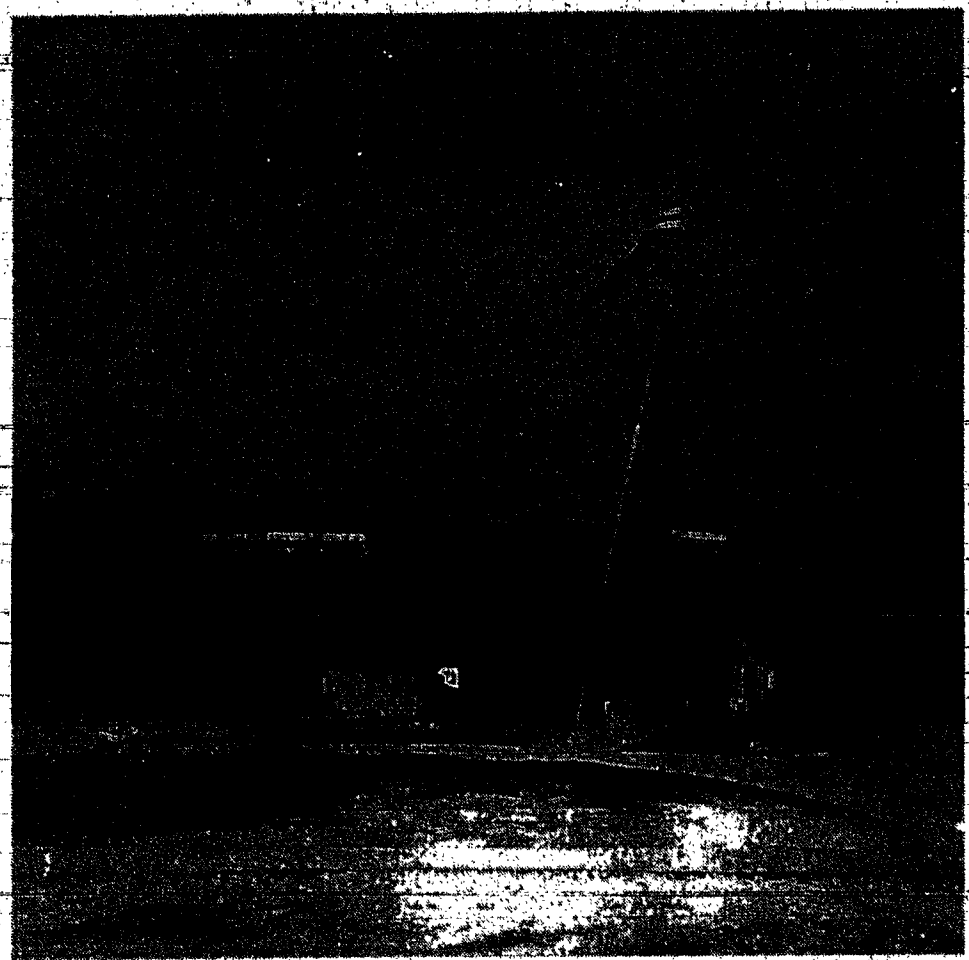

"The other nine tents have to be put up in Waveland, but we must wait until the asphalt hardens, then put the tents up before Monday, September 22 when the first group of children are scheduled to arrive."

Capt. Hill responded, "The Seabees will be pleased to # Hurricane Camille.....

OLD GLORY WAVES AGAIN—Just one month after Hurricane Camille left the St. Clare Catholic School in Waveland a mere steel skeleton, the American flag was waving proudly once again and the parish's children were back in temporary classrooms, just one example of the kind of spirit which welled forth from the people all across the Mississippi Gulf Coast after that killer storm in 1969 and prevails today in an attitude of "It can be done."

assist in this project." The SBA representative thought to himself: "No words from a Navy officer to a non-Navy non-officer ever sounded better - or more welcome."

School opened Wednesday morning, September 24. Sister Ruth told the story of how it all happened.

She asked the SBA representative to say a few words. Father Maloney expressed appreciation, the Bishop said a few words of prayer, and Sister Ruth rang the bell officially opening the school.

Three television channels were on hand to record the event along with representatives from the participating federal agencies whose personnel had worked together to use available resources, local and from the outside as needed, to do a job important to a community.

The roll call of federal agency personnel, local citizens, state and local government personnel, and volunteers who worked to complete a school in two weeks is far from complete. Nor was the story finished on opening day.

For example, the SBA representative asked the Office of Emergency Preparedness to assist with several portable toilets at a time when none existed for workers, faculty, volunteers, or visitors.

But a few portable toilets were not enough for 200 children. Temporarily they could use a few which were left on the second floor of the convent which had had its first floor severely damaged by the hurricane.

With winter approaching, however, and to care for the physical needs of the children over a six months period or longer required further tapping of available resources involving additional segments of the community.

A school father was seen waist deep in water as he tried strenuously to stop a pipe broken by a bulldozer. Later that pipe was the main source for water for a toilet trailer, a fourth single provided by NASA.

The Seabees were asked again for help. This time their many skills were demonstrated in the construction of a building, a temporary classroom, and a shower building.

These were salvaged from the interior of the damaged school building. But much more was done. A pipe was run from the Gulf of Mexico to the school building. A pipe was run from the Gulf of Mexico to the school building.

The crews from MCB No. 128 who worked to modify a trailer into a toilet facility had been scheduled to arrive from Vietnam on Sunday, the day of the hurricane, but their transport planes were diverted, some as far as New Jersey, some not arriving until the Tuesday after the storm.

Eleven weeks after Camille, the toilet trailer project was nearing completion as the Seabees received new orders that their battalion would be "de-commissioned" as of November 17, the men to be transferred to scattered duty posts, many overseas.

Meanwhile, the teenage volunteers continued to come on Saturdays. Painting and sand storm-tossed decks and chairs, sorting books arriving from publishing houses, some free, some at reduced cost, were among their duties.

The state board of education made available necessary up-to-date textbooks to cover course material. Checks arrived from people throughout the country who saw part of the opening day ceremonies on television.

Toward the end of October, SBA Administrator Hilary Sandoval made a second visit to Saint Clare's School.

His first had been during the week after the hurricane when Father Maloney told him of the school's plight.

On his second visit, ten weeks after Camille, Sandoval lunched with Father Maloney in a trailer made available by the Federal Housing Administration of the Department of Housing and Urban Development in lieu of his rectory which had been blown apart about midnight, Sunday, August 17, according to an eye-witness member of the Parish who spent the night with his family in a house on Vacation Lane which floated a hundred yards or more down the street.

Father Maloney said very simply, "I want to thank you for everything, Mr. Sandoval."

When the SBA Administrator visited the classrooms the children in the third grade trailer expressed themselves in words sung to the theme of the day.

"Well, hello, Mrs. Sandoval, may I greet to have you here? We are looking great, Mr. Sandoval."

"Mississippian's income should continue to grow," center tells

The slump in the national economy means some sluggish economic days ahead for the state according to the Mississippi R & D Center's Econometric Forecast released recently.

Taking into consideration many variables the forecast is used to predict the economic future for Mississippi for a ten-year period.

The July 1979 forecast shows that Mississippi will be affected by the gloomy national economic forecast.

"We can expect diminished growth and continued inflation," commented David K. Magee, Economic Analyst, Economic Analysis Division of the R & D Center.

Magee went on to say, "When the nation is experiencing hard economic times, the economy in Mississippi cannot help but suffer from it."

The Gross National Product (GNP) is showing very slow growth.

Data indicates the nation may be heading toward a recession (two consecutive quarters of negative growth of constant dollar GNP). Whether or not this technical criterion for recession is actually met in 1979 or 1980, Mississippi and the rest of the nation will experience some recession-related problems, such as an increasing unemployment rate and declining corporate profits.

A slowdown in economic activity and increased inflation (probably 11.7 percent in 1979) on the national level will contribute to a less-than-rosy economic picture for Mississippi.

The unemployment rate for Mississippi, although lower than the national average, are expected to increase and reach a peak level in 1981 of 7.5 percent.

By 1983 the unemployment rate in Mississippi is predicted to decrease to 6.0 percent.

The total output of goods and services in Mississippi, measured by the Gross State Product, is expected to increase by only 3.2 percent in 1979.

Output in lumber, household furniture, household equipment, and auto equipment is not expected to increase because of a decline in construction and auto sales.

On the other hand, the apparel industry will probably show some increased growth because the cost of the finished goods should increase less than that cost in other industries.

Mississippi can expect a decline in the construction of new homes. With home mortgage rates forecast to continue to rise throughout this year, construction activity is expected to remain depressed.

The April flooding throughout much of the state provided a temporary stimulus to construction.

There are some bright spots in the center's econometric forecast, however.

"Total personal income in Mississippi should continue to grow over the next decade, with the highest growth rates occurring between 1980 and 1981," stated Magee.

Since 1970 to 1978 Mississippi's total personal income grew at an average annual rate of approximately 11.8 percent, while the growth rate for the U.S. as a whole was 10.0 percent.

Mississippi's average per capita income, as a percentage of the national average, also has been increasing.

This increase, with a slight slump in 1979, is predicted to continue into the 1980's.

An econometric forecast of the Mississippi economy has been published by the R & D Center twice each year since the introduction of the Mississippi econometric model in September, 1978.

Mississippi was among the first of the more than thirty states that now have econometric forecasting capabilities.

Those interested in obtaining a copy of the forecast should contact David K. Magee, Economic Analysts Division, Mississippi Research and Development Center, Post Office Drawer 2470, Jackson, Mississippi 39205.

BUSES BACK AT WORK
We have had our gasoline budget raised by the State Welfare Dept., so we will be running our buses again every week.

We will also be going to Gulfport to the doctor specialists weekly. I know that this will relieve many of you as you need to purchase things like milk and fresh vegetables weekly. Thank you for being so patient and doing without. NEW BUS COMING!!!

John Rutherford tells us that we have enough money in an account he keeps for us so that the Supervisors can buy us a new bus to replace our old Chevy with broken air conditioning, etc.

The Supervisors voted to advertise for bids immediately! Thanks! We also congratulate those supervisors who have already won their bid for re-election.

We appreciate the help we have received from all of the Board, and thank them for their support.

COMING EVENTS
August 27th will be a "BYOL" (Bring your own lunch) Picnic at Buccaneer Park from 11-2 p.m. in the front part of the park.

We will have special entertainment - a bus load of Seniors Citizens from Mobile will provide music. This group travels around performing from their specially equipped trailer that is set up to provide a stage and electrical outlets for their instruments. This should be a lot of fun.

We will be honoring those who have birthdays in August at this event. We will provide drinks, cake, and home made ice cream. Y'all Come!!!

GAMES PARTY
Monday was the regular semi-monthly games party. Even with the hot weather, we had 52 eager participants. The black-out winner was Rosalie Freyder.

The games this week were sponsored by the Knights of Columbus. Our delicious cakes were provided by Ethel Dormain, John Galivan, Margaret Smith, and Genivieve Cole.

Our other volunteers were also a big help serving, calling, and acting as hosts. These kind people, some of them doubling up on their assistance, were Marie Fazande, Thelma White, Les and John Galivan, and Frank Gerard.

The Seniors surely do thank our volunteers for their assistance. There just isn't enough staff to do all that needs to be done.

FUNDING

As we mention in all of our columns, we would not be able to operate without the local match money provided by our Board of Supervisors, the cities of Bay St. Louis and Waveland, and the United Way. The State Dept. of Public Welfare handles the Federal share of the funds.

Health and Safety Tip

From the American Association

FIND YOUR FAMILY DOCTOR BEFORE ILLNESS STRIKES

(Presented as a public service by the Mississippi State Medical Association and this newspaper.)

You need a family doctor before illness strikes. Tragedy can befall those who wait to get a physician "until he is needed."

The physician traditionally provides medical care to anyone in need. However, he has priority responsibilities to his own patients; unless you are among them he may not be able to serve you at a moment's notice.

By having a physician before you are ill and by having periodic checkups, emergencies can often be anticipated and averted through preventive medical care.

How do you select a doctor for your family? Start by calling your local medical society for the names of several physicians in your neighborhood. You will find convenient traveling distances.

give the age, professional education, state of licensure, type of practice, teaching affiliation and medical organization membership for all physicians.

Is the prospective family doctor's office convenient for your family? What are his office hours? Do you prefer an older or younger physician? Will he make house calls? Do any of your family members have physical handicaps or disabilities which might require the care of a specialist?

Once you select your physician, call for an appointment for a physical examination. This will give the two of you the opportunity to get acquainted before you become ill.

Does he impress you favorably? Are you "comfortable" with him or her? In discussing family health needs, keep in mind your budget. Ask the doctor about his fees.

He may not be able to give you an exact price for every kind of service but he can tell you approximately what his fees are.

For your own good - and the health of your family - select a family doctor who will make house calls, who can be reached in an emergency, and who can be reached in an emergency.

QUESTION: I have found that in my area the price of having a dog spayed varied with each clinic. If the same procedure is routinely used in doing this surgery, why is the price higher at some clinics?

ANSWER: No doubt the spay is the most common surgery done in veterinary clinics so your question is often asked by others. It is not the fact that the surgical technique is usually the same that affects the cost nearly as much as other factors.

For example, a larger dog requires more anesthesia, more surgical materials, and more medication that a much smaller dog.

Older dogs are considered higher risk patients and demand more careful monitoring during and after surgery than younger, more healthy dogs.

If, for example, your pet is in season (heat) when she is presented for surgery, this presents needs for closer attention by the veterinarian. The length of hospital stay following surgery is also variable that can affect costs.

When considering where to have your pet's surgery done, it would be very wise to ask the veterinarian the following questions:

1. What is the cost for the operation? Be sure and ask if the price includes all expenses, such as anesthesia, hospitalization, medication, bandage materials, and surgery.

2. Ask what type of anesthesia will be used. Gas (inhalation) anesthesia may be a bit more expensive than the use of long lasting barbiturates, but gas anesthesia is considered safer for this type surgery.

With the use of gas anesthesia, oxygen and forced breathing are easily given if an emergency should develop during the surgery. This is not the situation if a long acting barbiturate has been injected into the blood system for the surgery.

Within the past 10 to 12 years, there has been a very progressive trend to gas anesthesia in the veterinary clinics across the country. If your veterinarian does not use gas anesthesia, ask if he has a readily available source of oxygen that could be used in an anesthetic crisis.

Gas anesthesia had another strong advantage in that it requires a much shorter recovery period than other types of anesthesia.

3. Ask whether or not pre-anesthetic medication is used. This may be a single drug or a combination of drugs given before the actual induction of anesthesia.

Pre-anesthetic medication is used for several reasons: It reduces excessive salivation and reduces the possibility of vomiting during the phases of induction of anesthesia and during the recovery period.

The inhalation of secretions or fluid into the lungs during anesthesia can lead to serious pneumonia.

Atropine is the drug most commonly used to prevent vomiting and excessive salivation, and it helps prevent irregular heart beats during surgery.

A tranquilizer is often used in conjunction with atropine. The tranquilizer helps lessen the animal's excitement prior to surgery and aids in a quiet and smooth recovery. When a tranquilizer is used as one of the pre-anesthetic drugs, the amount of anesthesia that has to be given to the animal during induction and during the surgery is greatly reduced.

If your pet is to have surgery in the late afternoon, ask if the veterinarian or a trained assistant will remain at the clinic until the animal has recovered from the anesthesia.

Also ask if the doctor routinely calls the owner when recovery from the anesthesia is complete. Do not hesitate to ask the clinic staff to call you after surgery; they know you are concerned about your pet and will generally call anyway.

5. Ask if your pet will be given any medication, such as antibiotics while in the hospital. Many veterinarians routinely give an antibiotic injection near the time of surgery and on the day after surgery.

While this may not be considered as essential, it is indeed a good practice.

Another excellent practice that helps prevent post-operative complications is the use of a bandage for 12 to 18 hours after surgery.

The bandage reduces swelling and hemorrhage at the incision site, and gives added support about the incision.

A body bandage is valuable to keep the animal from contaminating the incision site with feces and urine that the dog may void during the recovery state.

6. Ask what type of sterilization is used for the surgical instruments and other materials, such as sponges and drapes to protect the surgical incision site from contamination during the operation.

Sterilization using a steam autoclave is the best method of insuring that the instruments and materials used for the surgery are germ free.

7. Ask if the clinic has a policy requiring that all personnel admitted for board, surgery and treatment should have no such policy in their own homes or in the homes of their relatives.

If your veterinarian or his staff have no such policy, it is a good idea to ask if they have a policy of not allowing children or pets in the hospital.

These policies are for the protection of all pets that must stay in the hospital.

8. Many clinics send written instructions home detailing proper aftercare when the pet is discharged. If the clinic you choose does not routinely do this, ask the veterinarian to give you some written instructions on proper aftercare. This can help you avoid potential problems during the healing phase at home.

Be sure and advise the veterinarian of any previous surgery or serious health problems your pet has had.

If the dog is taking any type medication, you should take it to the clinic with the dog when your appointment is scheduled.

With these points in mind, discuss the planned surgery with the veterinarian, and choose your pet's doctor with the same care as you would select your personal surgeon.

If you are not satisfied with the answers you get, select another veterinarian. Remember, not all clinics offer the same degree of care, so ask questions about all phases of the surgery and aftercare that your pet will receive.

2. Ask what type of anesthesia will be used. Gas (inhalation) anesthesia may be a bit more expensive than the use of long lasting barbiturates, but gas anesthesia is considered safer for this type surgery.

With the use of gas anesthesia, oxygen and forced breathing are easily given if an emergency should develop during the surgery. This is not the situation if a long acting barbiturate has been injected into the blood system for the surgery.

Within the past 10 to 12 years, there has been a very progressive trend to gas anesthesia in the veterinary clinics across the country. If your veterinarian does not use gas anesthesia, ask if he has a readily available source of oxygen that could be used in an anesthetic crisis.

Gas anesthesia had another strong advantage in that it requires a much shorter recovery period than other types of anesthesia.

3. Ask whether or not pre-anesthetic medication is used. This may be a single drug or a combination of drugs given before the actual induction of anesthesia.

Pre-anesthetic medication is used for several reasons: It reduces excessive salivation and reduces the possibility of vomiting during the phases of induction of anesthesia and during the recovery period.

The inhalation of secretions or fluid into the lungs during anesthesia can lead to serious pneumonia.

Atropine is the drug most commonly used to prevent vomiting and excessive salivation, and it helps prevent irregular heart beats during surgery.

State Extension service reports farm income up

FARM NEWS
AND VIEWS
By Mike Windham
Extension Reporter

Nationwide, the total farm income for 1979 is moving up. That's the latest word from Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service Agricultural Economist D. Bob Williams.

He says producers can expect to set a record this year, with substantial increases over last year's income figures. The increased gross income figures also mean net incomes may be higher this year.

Dr. Williams thinks Mississippi producers will also see higher income levels in 1979. The figures, according to the economist, could be at an all-time high. In 1978, total farm income was valued at $2.6 billion; Dr. Williams feels the figure will be between $2.6 and $2.8 billion this year.

This will be a record-setting income for our farmers. Net farm income is also expected to show an increase.

"We've certainly seeing the cost of production move upward, but net farm income should also move upward," the Extension economist predicts.

"Back in 1974, we had net farm income in excess of $600 million. I think we'll reach that record level and maybe surpass it this year," he said.

Even with these optimistic figures and predictions, prices still aren't high enough for farmers to get an adequate return from their investments.

Since 1973, the value of consumer goods and the price of these goods have increased between 55 and 60 percent.

"When the record level of 1973 is compared with the predicted level of net income this year, you can see our farmers still have less purchasing power than they did in 1973," Dr. Williams reports.

The profit situation this fall, he says, is going to range between poor and fair. In particular, soybean profits could be only fair.

For this to happen, bean prices will have to stay near or above their current levels during the harvest season. Soybean prices will have to stay at $7.50 a bushel or higher before farmers can make a "fair" profit.

Cotton prices will have to move up for Mississippi farmers to have a profitable year, according to Dr. Williams.

"Overall, cotton prices will have to move up, but I'd class profits on cotton as poor to fair," he adds.

Farmers who produce above average yields this fall, and especially soybean producers who were able to forward contract part of their crops for $8 or more in June, have the best chances of putting a good year in their books.

Dr. Williams predicts this year's highest bean prices are behind us. He says only something unusual, such as the Russian Trade Deal, will be able to push soybean prices up to the $8 level of June.

The overall season price for soybeans will be about $6.75 to $7 a bushel. Department of Agriculture economists are not optimistic about seeing better prices although they admit it's still possible for beans to average $7.50 a bushel at the end of the season.

This year U.S. farmers planted 72 million acres in soybeans. This is 12 percent above the 64 million acres planted last year. It's also the largest crop the nation has ever planted. Predictions point upwards to two billion bushels of soybeans harvested by U.S. farmers this fall. Last year, the U.S. produced 1.8 billion bushels of soybeans. A crop that large could keep downward pressure on soybeans.

It's still early to predict what can happen to cotton prices. Weather and insect pressure can still play decisive roles in this year's cotton crop.

"We do have a larger acreage this year, with something like $13.9 million acres in cotton nationally. This is about 4 to 5 percent above acres planted in 1978," he says.

Prices could increase before harvest time. However, prices so far this year have stayed between 58 and 65 cents per pound.

Dr. Williams says he can't see a substantial price increase above this range, with current prices averaging 62 cents a pound.

"I think the season's average price will be about 60 cents a pound this year," the MCE economist predicts.

Williams says he doesn't agree with some of the current projection of a $4 million bale cotton harvest, but he does see a large enough cotton crop to continue to hold prices down to the 60 cents per pound level.

Regan Endorses Gil Carmichael

Ronald Reagan endorsed Gil Carmichael for Governor last week, followed by John Connally and Howard Baker.

"It is important to Republican momentum in America to win the Governor's race in Mississippi this year," Reagan said. "I am looking forward to working with you in any way I can."

Connally called Carmichael's candidacy "an opportunity for new leadership in Mississippi, the same kind Thad Cochran is providing in the Senate."

Gil and Thad are the basis for building the Republican Party in Mississippi. I will do all I can to help, Connally said.

Baker said Carmichael's campaign "represents one of the most exciting developments in politics since I've been in the Senate."

"For the first time Republicans have a real opportunity to win the governor's seat in Mississippi. I'll do whatever Gil asks me to do, Baker said.

"He's a great candidate," Baker emphasized.

Winter Promises Fresh Leadership

Democratic gubernatorial candidate William Winter, campaigning this week across Mississippi, called for "an end to the old ways of running state government."

"Much of what we have witnessed in state government in recent years is unacceptable," Winter said.

"Poor schools for our children, badly deteriorated roads and general neglect of Mississippians pressing needs are the result of dishonesty and mismanagement," Winter stated.

"It's time we had fresh, hardheaded leadership to restore order and stability to state government," the candidate proclaimed.

"We have all seen too much of the old politics of corruption and inefficiency. It's time for a new approach to state government. I will work to achieve an honest and effective government for all our people," Winter promised.

Winter concluded, saying "The people of Mississippi know what is occurring. They detect that they are being short-changed by their government. They recognize that to get their money's worth from state government they must elect a governor who can accomplish things and tackle hard problems head-on.

As governor I will not shrink from proposing tough solutions to the problems we face."

Fees for USM-NSTL are $31 per semester hour for undergraduate and $37 for graduate credit.

Courses offered include the areas of: reading improvement, intermediate accounting, industrial psychology, real estate principles, managerial communications, utilization-selection and preparation of audio-visual materials, remote sensing, programming languages, organization and management, and office management.

Class meetings generally will be from 4:30 p.m. - 8 p.m. "We are excited about the enthusiasm that has been generated over the offerings of USM at NSTL and look forward to our first term," Myron Webb, USM-NSTL coordinator said.

"We have done some educational needs research to determine what to schedule for this first term and our research will be more intense as we become operational," he said.

Information about USM-NSTL may be obtained by calling Myron Webb at (601) 688-3054 or (601) 684-2155.

Winter seeks home mortgage rate drop

Noting that many of Mississippi's young people are facing a housing crisis, gubernatorial candidate William Winter this week unveiled a program which would reduce home mortgage rates to middle income Mississippians by as much as 2.5 percent.

"If elected Governor, I plan to push for the adoption of a program called Homes for Mississippians," said Winter.

"Highly inflated construction costs coupled with climbing interest rates have priced many of our people out of the American Dream of home ownership," he added.

"Middle income Mississippians are hit hardest by the astronomical 10 and 12 percent interest rates now being charged on home mortgage loans," Winter emphasized.

Winter's plan to make home ownership more easily attainable includes a proposal to authorize either the state or localities to issue revenue bonds. These bonds would assist the private sector in providing additional mortgage money to potential homeowners at rates significantly below the going interest rates. Through this approach Winter said he expects to provide mortgage money at a rate between 8 and 8.5 percent.

In detailing his plan Winter stressed that this money would be loaned through regular private lending institutions. "It promises to promote local construction business, thereby bringing new jobs and economic activity to these communities. This will have a healthy effect throughout the local economy," Winter predicted.

"It is time that action be taken when only 28 percent of Mississippi families can qualify for a mortgage to purchase a median price home," said Winter. "During my administration action will be taken to insure that our people are able to share in the American Dream of owning a home in which to raise a family."

The occasional dangers of indiscriminate grazing by Mississippi livestock bear results that may range from death by poisoning to off-flavored milk, dairy products or meat products.

State landowners who have owned and milked their own milk cows long have known of the flavor problems caused in springtime by wild onions and later by bitterweeds. The common practice of straining milk through a clean flour sack or other filtration processes did nothing to improve the flavor, yet filtering served to remove any particles of trash that may have accidentally fallen into the milk pail during milking.

Mississippi's leading milk tainting plants are wild onions and bitterweeds, but there are others that occasionally may cause problems. These plants when eaten release aromatic substances into the bloodstream of the cow which adversely affects both the flavor and odor of the milk or dairy products. Further, some plants even permeate and alter the taste of animal meat.

Dog fennel, called cypressweed by some people, and wild mushrooms are common in the state and produce toxic properties. Common yarrow is less known. It is a white flowering fern-like weed that may be found primarily in disturbed soil. Occasionally this plant is transplanted into lawns for its ornamental appearance. Yarrow not only affects milk and meat flavor, but may cause milk discoloration and decreased production.

Ox-eye daisy occurs infrequently in Mississippi but is found in massive patches in Arkansas. Though usually it is shunned by cows for reason of low palatability, it occasionally is eaten and hurts milk flavor. It is also known as whiteweed, field daisy, or poorland flower.

Mayweed is fairly abundant in this state, usually found in broken ground around fields or turnrows, and its foliage is very aromatic and affects milk. Wild garlic creates problems similar to wild onions.

Tennessee highland farmers have to worry about colonies of wild-leek in woods and bottomlands because the mere inhalation of the volatile allyl sulfide from fresh herbage imparts onion flavor to milk. This one is also known as ramp. Indian mustard must be thrown in the milk tainting group also.

But southern dairymen are spared the problems of tansy in the Northeast which is linked with abortion in cattle. Alsike clover may produce photo sensitization known as trifoliosis in hogs, sheep, cattle and especially horses. This malady also is known as 'dew poisoning' since lesions develop most often on the animals' skin moistened by dew. This clover also may bring on liver damage and death.

Common St. John's Wort found in open woods in the state contains hypericin, a primary photosensitizer of white or pale skinned animals. It is seldom directly lethal, yet it may deal a death blow as a secondary effect.

The Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service's animal science department reports that this state's widespread cocklebur plants are toxic during certain growth stages. China berries are highly toxic during certain stages and castor beans are extremely toxic to animals or humans.

Clothing Specialist Says Fashion Reflects Lifestyle

MISSISSIPPI STATE — Fashion is part of our everyday lives, present not only in what we wear, but also expressed in the way we talk, eat and live.

According to Marguerite Davis, Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service clothing specialist, fashion is generally defined as the accepted style in dress at any given time — those specific characteristics of your clothing that distinguish it from other articles of clothing. A fashion trend may be the styles of clothing that are gaining popularity, she says.

The styles we buy determine what is called fashion. A clothing designer looks at the shapes, colors and "looks" we buy, and creates clothing to accommodate our needs. Therefore, fashion is always changing, as our attitudes, needs and lifestyles change.

Where you live also can affect your taste in clothing. Various areas of the country have different climates, customs and tastes in clothing. What you wear in one part of the country may not be acceptable in another part.

says Miss Davis.

Since fashions change from time to time, a pattern begins to form. Fashions rise, peak and decline in popularity; we commonly call this pattern the fashion cycle. Certain styles may reappear, but they never quite return the same. However, a particular style may remain in fashion indefinitely and become a "classic."

Miss Davis says widespread acceptance of a style may result in the development of a fashion. Even the development of new products, political events, sports and values may spark changes in fashion. Although promotional activities of the clothing industry can influence what we buy, they cannot succeed without consumer acceptance.

To design a fashionable wardrobe for all occasions, study the trends in fashion before you make major purchases; analyze fashions accepted by others in your locality; take stock of your available clothing on hand; determine needs; and remember that classic styles will not be dated as quickly.

Among the problems with trees are those caused by animals eating wilted leaves from wild cherry limbs brought to earth by storms.

Acorns create serious problems when eaten in the fall principally following a warm period and rain which may sprout acorns creating tannic acid toxic to the animal's system. The effects of tannic acid may weaken animals cumulatively similar to alcohol in the human liver.

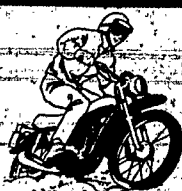

Sorghum is among the plants which produce prussic acid which when eaten by livestock may cause suffocation. This danger is greatest during periods of drought, frost, or other climatic events causing foliage wilt. Second growth sprouting appears to be the most toxic.

Psychologist's Photograph Exhibit Begins This Week

Dr. K. W. (Jake) Jacobs, of Oak Harbor, associate professor of psychology at Loyola University in New Orleans, will be exhibiting a collection of his photographs from Aug. 18 through Sept. 8 in Loyola's Danna Center Art Gallery.

The exhibit, Jacobs first in the southern U.S., is named "Two Shows in One," derived from the combination of color and abstract black and white works in the same show.

His black and white photographs use a high-contrast style and resemble abstract silhouettes and line drawings. Jacobs has used this style in most of his works from the 1960's, which have been exhibited widely in the U.S. and internationally in such faraway places as Bangkok and Taipei.

His current photo interests are reflected in his color works which portray less former images of people and places in our world. Jake's background in photography includes advertising and public relations photography, and newspaper and television photo journalism.

He has also supplied work to national wire services and TV networks. Prior to joining the Loyola faculty, he was employed in varied aspects of photography and advertising and taught community education courses in photography. Jacobs, whose interests in photography predate his psychology studies, is now researching the psychological effects of color on behavior, among other topics.

Recently, he has carried out research which suggests that the colors of medicines communicate information about the expected effects of the drug.

While there is usually little overlapping of his scientific and artistic interests, he is currently researching the psychology of the relationship between photographers and models.

Jake has earned an international reputation as an exhibit photographer and has been listed in Who's Who in Pictorial Print Photography by the Photographic Society of America.

He has repeatedly received acceptances of his work and honorable mention awards from an annual exhibition of creative photography in Puyallup, Wash. He has also held numerous one-man shows in the Midwest and has participated in a number of shows presented by groups of artists.

For the past five years he has been on the Loyola faculty, where he usually teaches courses in the biological aspects of behavior. He received his Ph.D. in experimental psychology from the University of Southern Mississippi. Jake's wife is Gloria Griffin, a nurse with South Mississippi Home Health and supervisor of their Picayune branch office.

Speaker Urges JSU Grads To Be A "Positive Influence"

More than 400 graduates at Jackson State University's summer commencement exercises today were challenged to bring forth excellence in their careers and relationship to mankind.

Dr. Johnny E. Tolliver, head of the university's department of mass communications, said the process of education must do more than provide routine methods of classroom instruction.

"We who are challenged with the responsibilities of educating young people must teach beyond the printed page," he said, quoting noted national scholar Dr. Benjamin E. Mays.

Tolliver, using as his subject "The Indomitable Will," said educators must imbue young students with a sense of self-pride and a determination to use the resources made available to them as a means for becoming positive influences in their homes, community and society.

Speaking directly to the graduates concerning their future, Tolliver said, "You can either break under the pressures of life or you can overcome them with an unyielding desire to become productive."

He said there is an apparent relaxation of social and moral codes of conduct prevalent today among America's younger generation. "A work ethic has been replaced by a getting-over ethic," he shouted.

You are graduating and we who profess to be teachers must instill in some and nurture in all of our young people the will to perform their very best," continued the 1966 Jackson State graduate. Tolliver added the survival and progress of black people in this country are one of the greatest testaments to the indomitable will of a people. The survival and spirited growth of Jackson State University since 1877 are the fruition of the collective will of the people who are part of the history of this institution, Tolliver said.

Jackson State University President D. John A. Peoples Jr., conferred degrees upon 417 graduates during the ceremony, which included 180 baccalaureate, 201 masters and 36 specialist degrees. Thirty-two of the graduates received their diplomas with honors at the 102 summer commencement exercises.

Other commencement features included the induction of graduates into the National Alumni Association, Inc. by association President Dr. Estemore A. Wolfe, Colonel Tom Adams, professor of military science at JSU, awarded commissions to 15 Army ROTC cadets.

Private headstone refund available to some veterans

Under Federal laws, the U.S. Veterans Administration can provide a headstone for the grave of most veterans whose military service was under honorable conditions.

According to Mike Ladner, Service Officer for Hancock County, the families of some veterans do not want the government grave marker, preferring to install a private marker of their own choice. Public Law 95-476, enacted during the 1978 Session of the U.S. Congress, now permits the Veterans Administration to pay a cash allowance toward the purchase of a non-government grave marker for the graves of eligible veterans.

The payment of the cash allowance applies only in cases where the burial of the eligible veteran has occurred on or after October 18, 1978, the date the above mentioned law was approved.

When a veteran is buried in a private or public cemetery, other than a National Cemetery, and the family or next of kin has purchased a private grave marker, a claim can be made for the cash payment from the VA.

VA Form 21-8834 can be used for this purpose, and must be supported by written proof of the purchase of the private grave marker.

The VA, following receipt of the application and proof of purchase, will pay a maximum of $50 to the claimant. This amount will be subject to periodic change, since the enabling legislation provided that the payment would be the same as what the VA must pay for the government headstones under the annual contracts.

Persons who feel they might be eligible for the VA reimbursement for the purchase of a private headstone for a veteran should contact their local Veterans Service Officer for assistance in making application for the lump-sum payment.

MUW Starts Classes in Late August

Mississippi University for Women, the nation's first and now its only state-supported institution of higher learning exclusively for women, will begin its 96th academic year in late August.

Dormitories at the university will open Sunday, Aug. 26, with registration for classes scheduled Tuesday, Aug. 28, and Wednesday, Aug. 29. Classes will start Thursday, Aug. 30.

For the first time, M.U.W. students this fall will have an opportunity to take Air Force Reserve Officers' Training Corps (ROTC) courses.

An agreement to offer the general military course and the professional officer course to qualified M.U.W. students was announced this spring by spokesmen for the Air Force, The W and the host campus, Mississippi State University in Starkville.

Under the agreement, MSU provides most of the classroom and related administrative facilities to support the aerospace studies program. A number of courses are being conducted at The W, however.

The Air Force ROTC program covers four years and is divided into two sequences, the general military and the professional officer courses.

The general military sequence for freshman and sophomores consists of the first two years of Air Force aerospace studies.

Juniors and seniors who enroll in the professional officer course are obligated by written agreement with the government to complete those courses and to accept a commission, if tendered.

The obligation also requires four years of active service in the Air Force.

Beginning its second year at The W is the cooperative education program which allows students to alternate study with work periods.

Martha Scott, director of cooperative education and placement, said, the program allows students to explore career choices, gain practical experiences related to academic endeavors and earn money to supplement their financial resources to assist them in continuing their educations.

Students alternate academic work with work at various companies and agencies.

The academic work rotations are approximately every four and a half months. Several new courses will be offered this fall through M.U.W.'s Office of Extended Studies, which administers evening college, weekend college and mini-courses.

Among new courses proposed for the fall agenda are effective public speaking, film appreciation, literature, and modern thought and historic preservation seminar. The W offers weekend college and evening college for women who find it difficult to attend college during regular school hours.

In addition, The W has established a career development program designed to help bring a more realistic career foundation to women in the Columbus vicinity.

"Assistance in meeting the career needs of adult women in local communities has been designated as the overall purpose of the community project," according to Dr. Delene Lee, assistant vice president for academic affairs, coordinator of the career development program and associate professor of business and economics.

The target audience for the program is expected to be approximately 400 area women. The two-point plan for the program includes a course of formal instruction in career advancement and a series of four to six seminars to provide relevant career information and education to all interested women, both employed and unemployed.

In addition to the baccalaureate and master's degrees, The W offers a two-year program in nursing, secretarial science and fashion merchandising.

The university also has courses necessary to meet admissions requirements for professional schools such as law, physical therapy, dental, medical, pharmacy and veterinary medicine.

The university also offers the educational specialist degree which is one degree higher than the master's level.

For more information about Mississippi University for Women, interested persons should contact the director of admissions, M.U.W., Columbus, Miss. 39701 or call (601) 328-5891.

Gulf Coast Oyster Study Underway

Gulf Coast Research Laboratory in Ocean Springs is conducting histopathological studies on Gulf Coast oysters is underway.

The year-long studies will determine the presence of intracellular parasites and observable tissue changes related to the growing environment of the oysters.

Funding in the amount of $7,241 was provided by the Mississippi-Alabama Sea Grant program.

"The results of these studies should be useful in the management of shellfish resources," Dr. William E. Hawkins, head of the Microscopy Section and the principal investigator stated. Both light and electron microscopes will be used in Hawkins' studies.

In addition to examining oysters from the waters of Mississippi Sound, Hawkins said, they will be studying oysters from different locations ranging from the west coast of Florida to Texas.

Oysters from other states are being supplied to the laboratory by the Shellfish Sanitation Laboratory of the Food and Drug Administration located on Dauphin Island, AL.

Hawkins noted the present study is a continuation of work he began a year ago.

"So far," he said, "we have concentrated our examinations on oysters taken from Mississippi Sound near Dauphin Island and from Biloxi Bay at Point Cadet. We have not found intracellular pathogenic organisms in these oysters, but we have found histological differences between oysters taken from the two sites that may indicate cellular responses to water-borne substances."

They are currently further characterizing these cellular changes while they continue to survey oysters from different sites.

"We also will try to determine whether the environment where an oyster lives induces changes in its cells and tissues, and if there are observable changes, we will try to determine the cause," added Hawkins.

He said whether oysters exhibit tissue and cellular changes in response to poor environment is not known; if they do, the oyster could prove useful as an indicator of environmental quality.

Correlation of tissue lesions in oysters with certain environmental parameters might influence reef relocation and site selection for cleaning oysters moved from closed waters.

MSU Registration Starts August 23

Registration for the 1979 fall semester at Mississippi State University will be held Aug. 23-24 in Humphrey Coliseum. L.D. Furgerson, dean of records and registration, said students who have preregistered may pick up registration packets only at or after scheduled times posted by the Registrar's Office.

"Students who did not participate in advance registration will register only on Friday, Aug. 24," he added.

Furgerson said complete registration schedules are available in the lobby of Allen Hall and at the Student Union Building.

Campus housing will open for occupancy at 1 p.m. Aug. 21. In addition, an orientation session for students who did not previously participate in the program will be held on the 22nd and 23rd. Furgerson said candidates for degrees in December should file for graduation during registration. Oct. 8 is the last day to apply for a degree during the fall semester.

All cadets enrolling in Army or Air Force ROTC for the first time are asked to report to the appropriate department in the ROTC Building immediately following registration.

Uniforms and textbooks will be issued and other administrative requirements completed at this time.

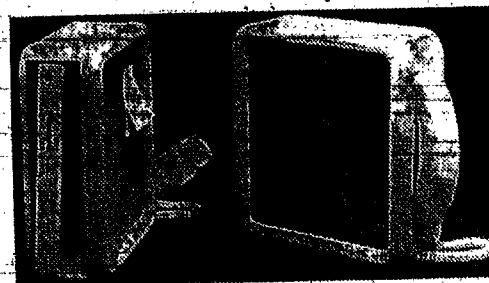

Students participating in the Cooperative Education Program should report to 222 Walker Engineering Building after registration.

For additional information on registration, contact the Office of Records and Registration, Box KR, Miss. State, MS. 39759

South Central Bell's Noteworthy® phone, pictured here, is one of the most practical phones around. It's part of our Design Line® telephone collection.

You'll never need to look for your telephone directory if you have a Noteworthy Phone—it's a wall phone that has a handy storage space for the phone book. And it has interchangeable magnetic blackboard and cork board panels.

The Noteworthy set costs $74.95 and is available in several colors: rustic butter yellow, white with simulated oak wood frame, or brown with simulated maple wood frame.

When you get a Noteworthy phone, you purchase the decorative housing which comes with a six-month limited warranty. The internal working parts remain our property, so maintenance and repair of those parts are our responsibility.

Call your South Central Bell Residence Service Center (formerly called business office) for details. Or go by the Phone Center Store and see a display of all the styles and colors available.

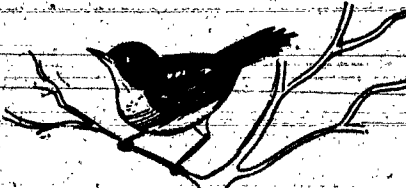

Please use the correct area code when dialing outside your own area code. You will avoid reaching a wrong number. Area codes for many cities are listed in the Call Guide Section of your directory.
